

‘LAUGHING TO DEATH’

Self-Deprecating Eclecticism Presents

ASHTON BROWN IS..

DYING TO MEET YOU

"If you like jokes about shitting the bed and incest mixed with big issues like the current state of mental health funding and gender equality, you should go meet Brown at his next gig." - Theatrescenes

"‘Ashton Brown is Anxious to Meet You’ was a bold, brilliant, and inventive mix of stand-up and performance art." ★★★★★ – The Speakeasy

Ashton Brown is a comic who is always looking for ways to use his comedy to discuss things that we, as a society, usually try to avoid. In 2017 he performed his first solo show, tackling what he thought was the toughest subject for comedy – his own mental health. After selling out his season, having an extra show added to the festival programme and receiving rave reviews - this sweaty, chaotic, ADHD ridden, hilarious mess wants to tackle something even darker.

DEATH.

Using a special blend of his charismatic stand-up comedy, his way too honest storytelling, ridiculous character sketch and inane interpretive dance – Ashton Brown presents Dying To Meet You. A show confronting life and death. From religion to atheism and everything in between – this hilarious show promises to tackle the subject head on whilst his tongue remains firmly in his cheek.

Death is unavoidable, unfathomable and terrifying. So we may as well laugh on the way out.
