

NZ's COCKIEST SKETCH TRIO, FRICKIN DANGEROUS BRO, SUIT UP FOR A BRAND NEW SHOW.

Frickin Dangerous Bro

HUMBLE

Pax Assadi, James Roque and Jamaine Ross are each familiar faces in the NZ comedy scene, but together (like a sort of comedy Voltron) they become the dynamic and impulsive, sketch comedy trio, Frickin Dangerous Bro.

Performing their brand new show HUMBLE from May 2nd, in both Auckland and Wellington, with the NZ International Comedy Festival, Assadi, Roque and Ross explore something a little new to them – humility.

Sounds deep, but ask them what their favourite thing about performing together is, and they'll tell you it's just about getting the audience to have some fun.

"There's a different vibe to working in a group, that you just don't get to have as a solo comedian, there's more room to play and be a bit loose."

What results is something "brilliantly untidy", with sketches that often draw from their shared "brown" experiences (being of Iranian/Pakistani, Filipino and Maori decent), playing on how we see each other and ourselves.

Frickin Dangerous Bro have been performing regularly sold out shows around New Zealand, since their debut together in the 2015 NZ International Comedy Festival.

You may also recognise them from appearances on 7 Days, Jono and Ben, Funny Girls, the 2017 Flick Electric Co Comedy Gala, AotearoHA: Rising Stars or Maori TV's flagship sketch comedy show Only In Aotearoa.

Performing as part of the 2018 NZ International Comedy Festival with Best Foods Mayo from 26 April – 20 May.

Praise for Frickin Dangerous Bro:

"It is hard not to fall for the lovable charm of Frickin Dangerous Bro who's friendship and shared humour has created a homegrown delight." – Keeping Up With NZ

"Their subtle yet pointed humour did well in addressing race and gender issues facing New Zealand. It was smart comedy at its best." – The Waikato Times
